

How to Wash a Woolly Mammoth

Is your prehistoric pet smelling like mud? Are you tired of having to mop and Hoover up all your mammoth's muck and mess? Is your house smelling like it would in the streets of London five hundred years ago? If so, your stone age softie needs a bath! Do not worry and despair, for these instructions will guide you along the way. Although woolly mammoths are big, they are easy to wash. Now, let's turn this battle into a breeze. Let's dive in!

What you will need:

- A massive piece of soap with your favourite smell
- An extra large hot tub from
W.O.O.L.L.Y.M.A.M.M.O.T.H WASHING
- A TOWEL FROM Stone Age Comfort
- Umbrella from Stone Age Water Protection
- A cake from Stone Age Baking
- Ten bottles of children's bath bubbles
- A scrubbing brush from Prehistoric Itch

Step 1

First of all, you have to persuade your filthy, dirty woolly mammoth to get into the bathroom and then in the bath while you run the bath. BUT, this may be a problem because woolly mammoths do not like baths (even though they are so smelly). Also, you must be careful because if your mammoth is thirsty then it could take an hour or so to get the bath filled up because your mammoth will quickly slurp up all the bath water. So, I would recommend giving it quite a lot of water before you run the bath.

Step 2

Then, add the foamy bubble wash to the bath water. However, you may need to be quite careful because your mammoth might be very cheeky and pop all the bubbles as fast as it can so it will take quite a lot of attempts to fill the bath with bubbles.

Step 3

Now, this is one of the trickiest parts because you need to get your furry friend into the bath. He will probably run away and hide so you need to get some delicious chocolate cake and put it in the very end where it's facing the wall. Then, quickly hide behind the bath and when your smelly softie gets in the bath and starts eating, quickly climb on your mammoth so it can't escape.

Step 4

Next, start to scrub your mammoth thoroughly but carefully. Don't forget to scrub behind its ears. Its tummy is very tickly so hold onto something while you're scrubbing its tummy.

Step 5

Get your soapy, glossy shampoo and dump it on his back. While you scrub it over him, don't get it in his eyes or he will jump out the window and land in a puddle of mud. Then, you will need to do these instructions all over again. Sometimes, this takes about ten times.

Step 6

Last, but not least, lift your soft, smooth softie out of the bath and then dump it on the floor. Then, after that get the towels and a piece of cake and give it to your wet, woolly mammoth while you're drying him with the towel after he has been so brave to have a bath. Enjoy a long snuggle.

George. M